Goodness gracious Meera!

Meera Syal – stage and screen actress, award-winning novelist, wit, raconteur and comedy writer, recipient of an MBE for services to the arts – tells me that her comedy influences include Bette Midler, Joyce Grenfell, Jennifer Saunders and Beryl Reid. A pretty varied bag, when you think about it. Her main inspiration, though, is a chap. ‘Woody Allen has had a big influence on me,’ she says. ‘I used to watch his films, with the food thing, the guilt thing, the mother thing, and think: “God, he’s writing about an Indian family!”’ The food thing, guilt thing and mother thing all loom large in Goodness Gracious Me, the hit sketch show co-written by, and starring, Syal. The series has launched such characters as the Kapoor family, who pronounce their name ‘Cooper’ in a determined effort to integrate, and delights in turning racial stereotypes on their heads.

Has the show offended anyone in the Asian community, I wonder? ‘I would say 99 per cent of Asians have been extremely supportive,’ says Syal. ‘Over two series there have been about ten complaints, always about religion.’ Syal is a fan of Paul Whitehouse and co but dismisses the suggestion that Goodness Gracious Me amounts to an Asian version of The Fast Show. ‘The Fast Show’s sketches are a lot more open-ended,’ she says, ‘in fact some of them are really non-sketches and they don’t always have punchlines. Our sketches are longer, and we have punchlines, which you can usually see coming from a long way off.’ Goodness Gracious Me will be back anew in some form this year, and in the meantime Syal has sold the television rights of her second novel, Life Isn’t All Ha Ha Hee Hee, to the production company Hat Trick, who plan to serialise it for the BBC. If not all ha ha hee hee, life is certainly pretty sweet for Syal, though she still has unfulfilled ambitions. ‘There are certain people, like Mike Leigh, I’d love to work with. And I have long admired Kathy Burke. I’d do absolutely anything with her.’ Casting directors, take note. Goodness Gracious Me, UK Play, from Saturday 12th, 1.00am

By Royle appointment

The last time I saw Caroline Aherne she had just watched the final episode of The Larry Sanders Show – and couldn’t praise it too highly. ‘If you ever wanted to watch a perfect comedy, that was it,’ she said. And she should know – The Mrs Merton Show, at its peak, was sublimely funny. And The Royle Family, whose second series can be seen on UK Gold this month, is one of the cleverest and most original comedies for years.

Cracker creator Jimmy McGovern might not be associated with comedy, but he knows a thing or two about writing. ‘I was gobsmacked when I first saw it,’ he told me. ‘I hadn’t been that impressed with a comedy since Fawlty Towers.’ McGovern loved the fact that, beneath the Royles’ squabbling, there was real warmth. And Aherne insists that The Mrs Merton Show was about warmth, too. As cutting as she could be to her guests, she never poked fun too mercilessly if she didn’t think they could stand up for themselves. Her co-writers were desperate for her to kick off an interview with Jimmy Hill by saying: ‘Why the long face, Jimmy?’, but Aherne rejected it as too cruel.

She is currently working on another series of The Royle Family, with the enticing prospect of a feature film in the pipeline. ‘I’m mad for films,’ she says. ‘When I saw It’s a Wonderful Life for the first time I was completely enchanted. Andy Harries [executive producer of The Royle Family] bought it for me for Christmas, with a card saying: “It really is, you know.” Wasn’t that lovely of him? He thought, “She’s tried to top herself, and here’s a film about topping yourself.”’

Aherne makes light of that episode in her life, which, in any case, is now well and truly behind her. And if, in May, she picks up a BAFTA, she will have bounced back – as The Royle Family’s Dave would say – big style. The Royle Family, UK Gold, from Wednesday 16th, 9.40pm

The future of TV animation?

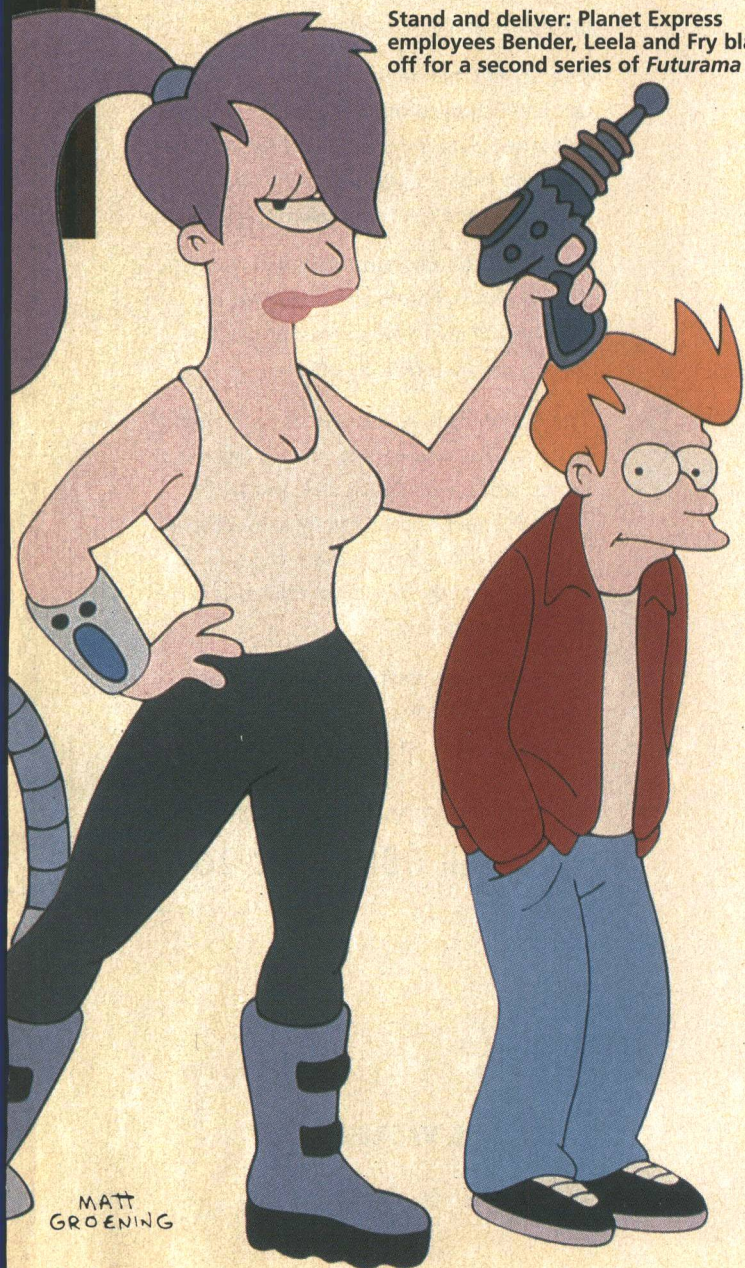

Futurama is an animated space adventure about Fry, a pizza delivery boy, who is defrosted after being cryogenically frozen for a thousand years. He then teams up with an alien martial arts expert, who's sensitive about having only one eye, and a kleptomaniac, pornography-loving robot – all of which rather makes you wonder why Matt Groening, Futurama's creator, couldn't have come up with a more original story. It's all so hackneyed. In the new series, the voices of Claudia Schiffer, Steven Hawking and John Goodman are rumoured to be making guest appearances, which demonstrates that Futurama is making ground on The Simpsons as the show on which to be heard if not seen.

Groening, also the creator of The Simpsons, had to field some pretty wacky questions about the two shows in an on-line question-and-answer session recently. For instance: 'If there were to be a cartoon bar fight between The Simpsons and Futurama, who would win and why?'

Groening gave the issue serious consideration. 'Well, the characters in Futurama have ray guns,' he replied, 'so they have a slight advantage. However, Mo the bartender would probably fight with broken bottles and Homer would no doubt run away. So Homer would win by running away.' Thank goodness that's settled.

Futurama, Sky One, Tuesdays (see listings for times)

Stand and deliver: Planet Express employees Bender, Leela and Fry blast off for a second series of Futurama

For Sue, nothing's taboo

Sue Perkins did not get where she is today – presenting Sky's irreverent film show Movie Babylon, to be precise – by sitting on the fence. 'I absolutely can't abide Gwyneth Paltrow,' she says, apropos of nothing in particular. 'She has a non-existent screen presence. She's just this insipid blonde moving from frame to frame. In Shakespeare in Love [see pages 14-15] she had one scene with Judi Dench and she was just blown off the screen.'

Perkins, who rose to prominence with her friend Mel Giedroyc presenting Channel 4's Late Lunch, does not shrink from damning Paltrow, partly because Paltrow has not shrunk from damning Britain. 'I don't like Brit-bashing from Americans,' Perkins tells me. 'Tom Hanks was rude about us as well, saying we're too uptight and reserved, which is just a ridiculous generalisation. It's like me saying that all Americans are loud-mouthed and cretinous.' Aren't they? 'I know some who aren't.'

While she's in the mood, which other film stars would she like to stick the boot into? 'I think Matt Damon and Ben Affleck are over-rated. I watched Good Will Hunting in America, and I was a lone voice of dissent. Everyone else thought it was fabulous. I found it rather twee.' So with Valentine's Day approaching, is there no actor with whom she would like to share a romantic night out? 'Johnny Depp is interesting. But on the whole I prefer older actors, men with a bit of gravitas. I love Anthony Hopkins and Morgan Freeman. They have real magic.'

Perkins had her first taste of cinematic magic when her grandmother took her to see The Jungle Book. It was freezing outside but warm in the cinema, and she duly fell asleep waking only to see the hypnotic eyes of Kaa the snake.

'I've been terrified of snakes ever since,' she reveals. Spooky films, however, she can deal with. In her top three films of all time, along with Cinema Paradiso and either Woody Allen's Annie Hall or Manhattan, she includes 'anything by Alfred Hitchcock. Also, I really enjoyed The Sixth Sense and thought Bruce Willis was excellent. He's a really under-rated actor and I think he could get an Oscar for that performance.'

Just to conclude on a less friendly note, though, who would be the last person to whom she would give an Oscar? 'Natalie Portman for Star Wars: The Phantom Menace. Actually, anyone for Star Wars: The Phantom Menace.'

Movie Babylon, Sky MovieMax, Fridays (see listings for times)

The good, the bad and the over-rated: Movie Babylon host Sue Perkins (top) dishes out a bouquet to Bruce Willis for The Sixth Sense, but brickbats go to Gwyneth Paltrow and Matt Damon

This year Julia Carling, Johnny Vaughan, Denise Van Outen, Melissa Joan Hart, Julia Bradbury and Sarah Michelle Gellar have all been prominent on the pages of Cable Guide owing to their popular appearances on cable.

And among last year's favourite channels were Disney Channel (children's/teen channel), Sky One (entertainment channel), Discovery (documentary channel), Sci-Fi (most innovative and exciting channel) and Sky Sports 1 (sports channel).

CABLE & WIRELESS

THESE DAYS, Jennifer Aniston is not quite such good friends with the press. She seems to regard journalists in the same way a trapped fox eyes up a pack of baying hounds.

The trouble is, not only is she a star of one of the most successful sitcoms in the world – Friends – but she also happens to have a boyfriend who's just as famous as she is. With the possible exception of Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman, Aniston and partner Brad Pitt (top) are the celebrity couple of the moment.

That, of course, has led to an awful lot of press attention and, she would have you believe, a hell of a lot of nonsense being written about the pair of them.

'I've come to believe that there is some guy in his little office trying to write something that will make you feel bad, and that's his purpose for the day,' she complains. 'Ninety per cent of the time, it's wrong. There have been so many weird things written about us. There was one story about how I was anorexic, that was pretty absurd.'

It's a shame because, when she does let her guard down, Aniston, who's 31 this month, comes across as a lot of fun and rather charming. But when it comes to asking her about Mr Pitt, the defences, and hackles, are raised.

Mention that in a recent interview her other half described her as gorgeous, sexy and 'complicated', and she's none too impressed.

'I don't know what he means by that. You would have to ask him. But I hope it's something good. I don't know that it's just me that's complicated. I think everybody is complicated. Everybody is just trying to figure it all out.'

So how would she describe Brad, then? 'I can't do that. I don't know how.' So there you go. Which puts paid to asking if it's true that they plan to marry next year. On other subjects, however, she is rather more forthcoming.

There is an obvious bond between Aniston and her

SKY ONE

THURSDAYS
9.00PM

The Rachel Papers

Friends co-stars Courteney Cox (Monica), Lisa Kudrow (Phoebe), Matthew Perry (Chandler), David Schwimmer (Ross) and Matt LeBlanc (Joey). They really are pals off screen as well as on – when Cox married actor David Arquette last June, the famous five were at the top of the invitation list.

That bond, Aniston says, comes from the fact only the six of them really know what it's like to have lived the Friends roller-coaster ride to fame and fortune.

'No one else can understand it,' she says. 'People go: "Wow, they are lucky, they've got it all." Whereas we go: "This is crazy, this is wild, what does this mean? Is it real? None of it is real ..."'

She adds that her life away from work is becoming increasingly important to her. 'My home, my house, my life, myself, my evolution as a human being. I read, I paint, I work in the garden. My personal life, that becomes more and more precious.'

Not that she isn't happy with life on Friends where, as usual, the story line of whether Ross and Rachel will finally get back together is still bubbling away.

'Part of the fun and the conflict in the show is how long can we keep these two people apart. It makes it interesting. People sort of forget about the Ross and Rachel thing and then we resurrect it and it's, like: "Oh yeah, it's those two ..."'

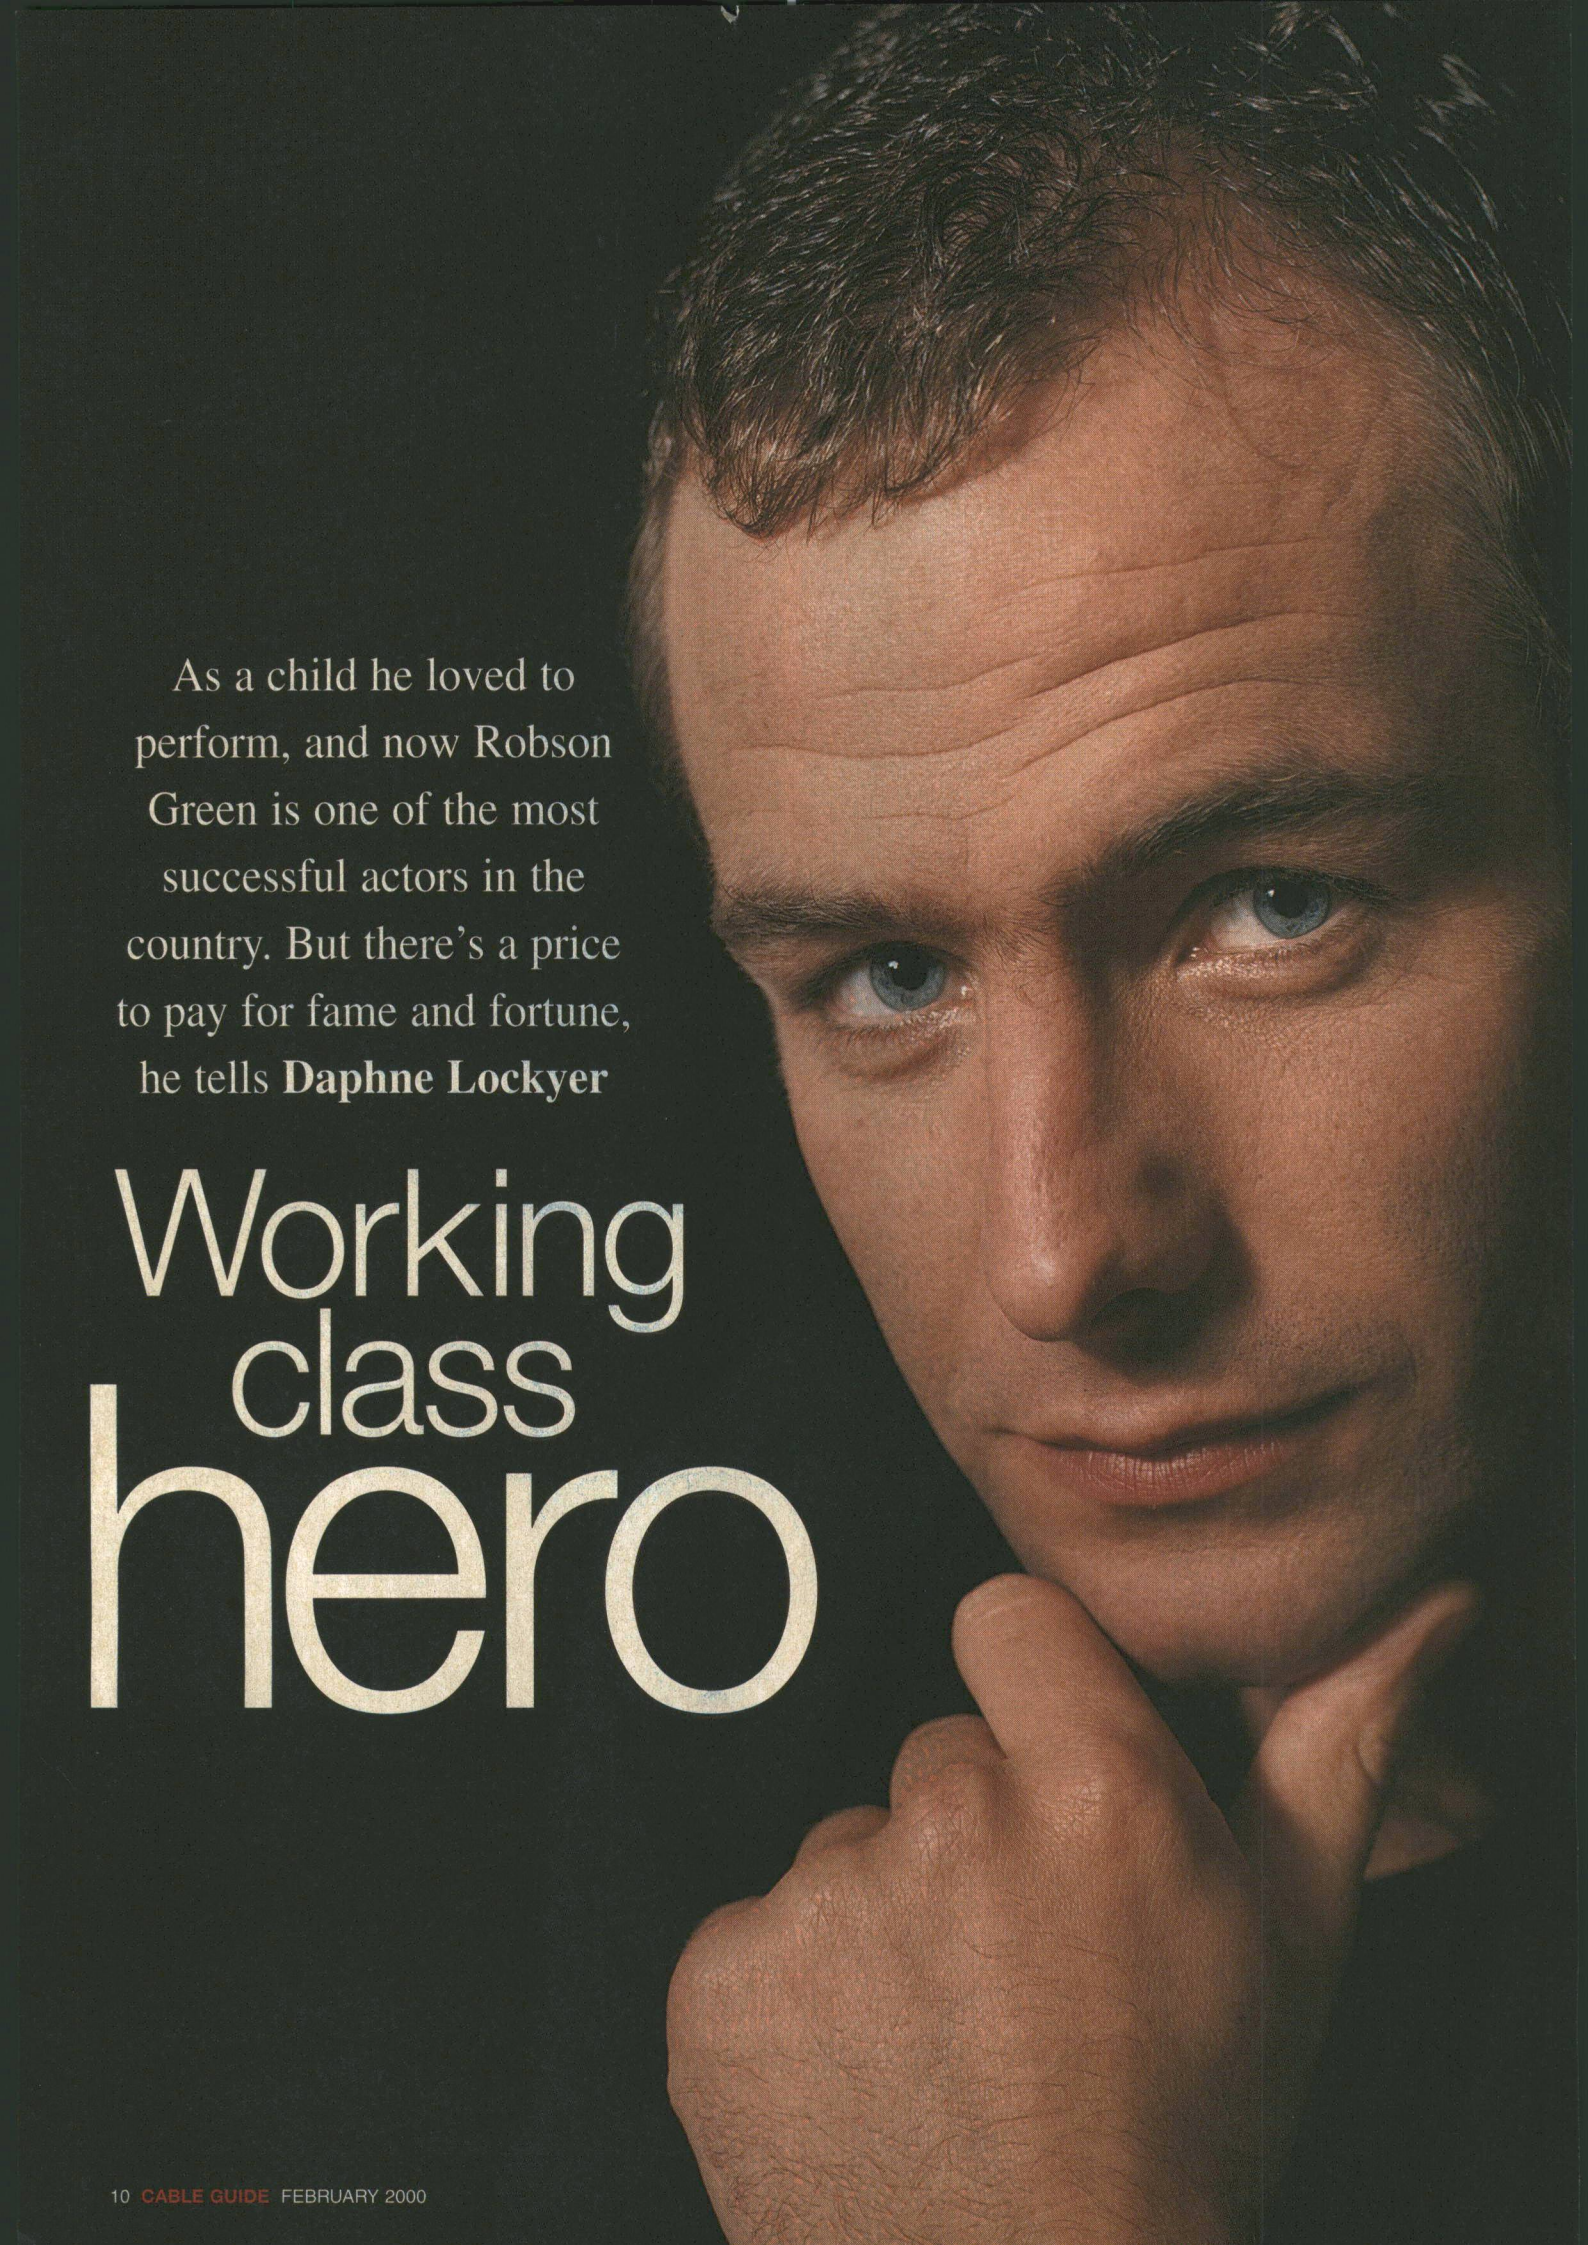

Because people are always interested in romance, aren't they? Just ask Jennifer.

As half of Hollywood's 'golden' couple, Jennifer Aniston is well aware of the potential Pitt-falls of too much press attention.

As a child he loved to perform, and now Robson Green is one of the most successful actors in the country. But there's a price to pay for fame and fortune, he tells Daphne Lockyer

Working class hero

ROBSON GREEN is acting – and that's what he's best at. He's filming scenes at the South Terminal of Gatwick Airport for the second series of Grafters, in which he and Stephen Tompkinson play Jack-the-Lad Geordie builders Joe and Trevor. They're shooting an emotional encounter in which Green's character, Joe, tries to salvage the relationship with the woman who dominates his love life in the new series, Viv (played by Lesley Vickerage).

On screen, as in life, the course of true love does not run smoothly. 'It wouldn't be very interesting, dramatically, if it did,' Green smiles.

Interesting or not, Green says this will be the last series of Grafters. Not just because the story and the relationships in it will have run their course, but also because the amount of grafting required to produce eight one-hour episodes can be excessive. 'I don't think I can do any more eight-hour shows,' he says. 'Six is the maximum.'

So while he remains one of Britain's hardest-working and highest-paid actors, he appreciates that working on this scale can exact a price in terms of your personal life.

During the making of Grafters, Stephen Tompkinson and Green have experienced huge problems in their relationships – Tompkinson's, with actress Dervla Kirwan, hit the rocks, 'pressure of work' on both sides being blamed. And Green, too, has had to deal with problems in his eight-year marriage to his wife, Alison, amid a flurry of bad publicity.

The trials and tribulations involved have cemented the relationship between the two men, who play brothers so convincingly on screen. They have similar backgrounds, share the same left-wing political views and are 'similar in our drive and our need to work', Green explains. 'We're very comfortable in each other's company.'

They became friends when both were struggling actors attempting to break into the big time. Green, fresh out of theatre work and small TV roles in the Northeast, played Jimmy Powell in Casualty, a part for which Tompkinson had also auditioned. 'In the end I got it and he didn't. But Steve came in for an episode to play a guy who was horrifically burned in an accident. There I was on set pushing this terribly blistered body, which was Stephen, along the corridor thinking to myself: "I've got a three-year contract and you're getting killed off."'

Over the years the two actors stayed in touch, and Tompkinson was Green's first choice to play his brother in Grafters. They share a love of the job and a similar sense of humour. 'We're brothers on the screen and we're friends off it. We make each other laugh,' Green says with a grin.

That sense of humour has been vital to the star as he battled through what must have been the toughest year of his life. Green is reluctant to discuss the details of his marriage problems, but it's clear he has suffered a lot from the kiss-and-tell stories that have blighted his life. Whereas once he was open and friendly in interviews, these days Green is more guarded. He's anxious not to add more fuel to the flames of press speculation that have engulfed his marriage.

Were it not for the fact that he understands the value of publicity, Green would not be giving interviews at all. But he recalls the early days, when he broke through to the big time as Dave Tucker on Soldier, Soldier. 'In my time I've had some very nice things written about me and I've had some very bad things. It's getting that equilibrium to deal with it that's hard.'

This year the unproductive and destructive side has raised its head and caused a large amount of soul-searching on Green's part. It left him reflecting on fame and the pressures that go with it, which are especially hard for someone whose background did not prepare him for celebrity.

'You do see that a lot of working class lads who escape their backgrounds, via sport and showbusiness, often encounter problems. Maybe there is guilt because their mates have ended up working down a mine or on a factory floor and they have become highly paid for doing a job that they love. I've thought about this more lately and for me acting was ... an avenue through which I could escape the industrial back drop of the Northeast.'

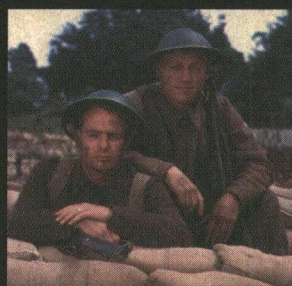

'I was a performer as a kid in terms of craving attention. I suppose at the age of six we're all performers, but there was just something very different about me. I don't really know where it came from. What I do know is that a lot of working class people who succeed eventually have to deal with the problems that fame and fortune creates. There are a lot of footballers, for example, who go into therapy, like Gazza, who come from the same working class background. Football is an escape, just like acting is an escape.'

Green still believes, despite the bad press about his marriage, that he's had an extremely fortunate life. He has his own production company and ploughs resources back into his native Northeast to encourage talent in youth theatres. His own TV career continues to go from strength to strength and has included successes such as Reckless, Rhinoceros, Touching Evil, Soldier, Soldier and Grafters. They are all being shown in ITV2's A Weekend with Robson Green, which includes an interview in which Green discusses his life and career.

Green's touch is certainly a golden one. 'My second name is Midas,' he laughs. 'But luck has definitely had something to do with it! So has my willingness to work hard – I'm never late, I always know my lines. I don't even think that's anything to shout about. It's just the way it is.'

PRICKLY HEAT

HOT STUFF?

He presents Sky One's raucous seaside game show Prickly Heat, but what Julian Clary really enjoys is the quiet life. Interview: Neil Bonner

BOLD, BRASH and tasteless – and we're talking about the good points of Sky One's outrageous series Prickly Heat. But if you like your game shows hot and sexy, then this is definitely the programme for you.

Host Julian Clary enjoyed his stint co-presenting the first series so much that he couldn't wait to pay another visit to Magaluf. And, not surprisingly, he and the team were welcomed back with open arms by the Majorcan resort's bar owners, whose profits must soar when the show hits town.

'There is a considerable amount of alcohol consumed,' says Clary, with typical understatement. 'Everyone is there to have a good time, including myself.'

For those yet to catch the show, imagine a seaside version of It's a Knockout, in which a seemingly unlimited capacity for alcohol and mischief appear to be the main prerequisites for victory, even though some of the games do require a degree of physical fitness.

'We have to have a medic on the scene at all times,' says Clary. 'Just in case anyone gets into trouble. One girl had a panic attack during a game and that can be awful. I know, because I suffer from them too, though I'm having therapy to combat the problem.'

Cameras follow the exploits of the contestants, not just while playing the games – such as how many fish they can shove down their bathers while scrambling over a giant inflatable – but also into the resort's bars and bedrooms.

'As well as presenting the games with the lovely Denise Van Outen, I pay unannounced visits to bedrooms the morning after the night before, to see who's been sleeping with who,' Clary confides.

'As you walk in, you never know quite what to expect, but the worst thing is the smell! The first thing I do is throw open the windows to let some fresh air in.'

Amid all the high jinks, Clary would seem to be an obvious target for the odd jape. A quick nudge into the swimming pool, perhaps?

'Oh, they know better than to do anything like that,' he says. 'No, I never get any trouble from them. And when

I'm not actually working, I stay out of sight, well away from their hotel.'

'They've actually been a really good crowd, for both series, and during the two weeks you get to know some of them really well. It's quite sad when the partying stops and everyone goes home.'

Clary was already a huge fan of Majorca, for its peace and quiet – something relatively scarce when Prickly Heat is in session. 'I've been going there for years and have an apartment on the island,' he reveals. 'It's a beautiful part of the world and the perfect spot to unwind. And the great thing is, it's so convenient to get to from London. I stayed on to soak up some more sun after Denise and all the others had packed up and gone.'

'I'm certainly thinking of retiring at 50. Don't get me wrong, I enjoy what I do, but there's more to life than work'

The comic-turned-presenter might consider retiring to the sunshine isle – and that's an option he could be taking up within a decade.

'I'm certainly thinking of retiring at 50,' he says, with no trace of irony. 'Don't get me wrong, I enjoy what I do very much, but there's more to life than work. I could afford to ease up now but I don't want to stop. I'll reconsider as I approach 50.'

So will this year be a busy one? 'I hope so,' he grins. 'I've got several things lined up, including another series of It's Only TV But I Like It for BBC1, and I'd like to do another Prickly Heat, maybe in a different location next time. Denise and I had so much fun that, tiring though it is, it isn't like work.'

'In fact, we get on so well together we've been talking about how nice it would be to do a live, lunchtime TV chat show together – a return to the halcyon days of Pebble Mill at One!'

All that glitters ...

JONATHAN RHYNS MEYERS is still living in a no-man's land of constantly being tipped as a rising star, without quite getting there. It has little to do with his talents, rather that the films he's been in have not achieved their expected breakthrough.

Take his lead role in this month's premiere, Velvet Goldmine. Rhys Meyers plays a bisexual Seventies rock star opposite Ewan McGregor, in a movie that was the talk of the Cannes Film Festival. But despite some good performances, the box office did not match the hype and, as with his other projects – such as The Disappearance of Finbar, Telling Lies in America (with Calista Flockhart) and The Governess (with Minnie Driver) – the film failed to ignite public interest.

But at only 22, time is on the side of Rhys Myers, who can currently be seen on the big screen in Ang Lee's American Civil War film Ride with the Devil and The Loss of Sexual Innocence, as a shy teenager trying to get Kelly (Trainspotting) MacDonald into bed.

'The trouble is, I feel a bit of a failure,' he admits. 'I've got a lot of learning to do. Also, the moment I ever see myself as a movie star I am finished. It would go straight to my head and I would behave appallingly. I want to become a good man, first.'

Rhys Meyers is Irish and there is the touch of the poet about his speech patterns. A somewhat unconventional star, he chooses to backpack around Europe between films or return to his home city of Cork, where he and three brothers were brought up by their mother in considerable poverty after his father moved out.

'I believe to get the best out of life, you have to live on the edge of it,' he says. 'I make these films, then see them a year or more later. It is like looking at a painting from your past. Some are good experiences, others not so good.'

'Velvet Goldmine I loved. I look so physically different and it was a great working experience with Ewan. But going to Cannes to promote it was a nightmare. I felt like a piece of meat.'

'No one recognised me from the film. A group of bouncers tried to stop me going into the premiere, which made me feel as if I should not be there.'

'It does not help that none of the films I've been in have had great success. I think to myself: "Is that down to me?". I get the same feeling when I go to an audition and don't get the part. I don't find it all an easy process.'

Rhys Meyers was expelled from school at 14 and left home at 15 because he could not face continued poverty. 'I left to try and make my life better, but I cannot jump up and down with delight about it so far,' he says. 'My mother has not had a happy life, and I think it's rubbed off on me.'

He's a bit of a tortured soul, is Jonathan. But once his confidence catches up with his talent, then life will become much easier.

NEW SERIES

SKY ONE

THE STRANGERERS
STARTS TUESDAY 15TH
9.00PM

Red Dwarf writer Rob Grant was very excited when he took his idea for a new sci-fi sitcom to the BBC. His draft pilot episode for The Strangerers, about three alien invaders who take on human form, was enthusiastically received and he was commissioned to write a second instalment.

But a few days later came the bombshell. The BBC had just bought an American sitcom with a similar theme, which put paid to Grant's prospects.

Then, while he was deciding quite where to go next, he received a phone call from Sky.

'Somebody there had got hold of my script, I'm still not sure how, and they told me they wanted to make the show,' he recalls. 'I was a bit suspicious at first because, basically, satellite and cable channels don't make programmes like this. Sky said they wanted to change that and start producing their own distinctive brand of comedy.'

Indeed Sky, who have also signed up Harry Enfield to do a series for them, claim they are launching a new era of television comedy and are typically bullish about it.

'We want to do for comedy in the new Millennium what the BBC did in the Eighties and Channel Four did in the Nineties,' explains a spokesperson, adding: 'We have conquered sport and news on television, now we are turning our attention to comedy.'

Nonetheless, Grant still took some convincing. 'I was afraid at first that they wouldn't be committed to making the series properly and they wouldn't want to put up enough money to do so,' he says. 'But in fact we had a £3m budget for five hours of television, shot on film, and special effects from the Moving Picture Company, who provide effects for Hollywood movies.'

Now Grant hopes that The Strangerers, which is being launched as an hour-long episode followed by eight half hours, will continue what is fast becoming a modern TV trend – a cable/satellite production premiered on cable channels and then sold on to terrestrial TV.

'We are fairly confident that there will be a terrestrial sale,' says Grant. 'It's the opposite to the way things have been in the past, with terrestrial companies producing the shows and satellite and cable channels picking them up.'

The Strangerers is certainly distinctive, innovative comedy, as any viewer who has seen Rob Grant's previous off-the-wall offerings, such as Red Dwarf and ITV's recent Millennium comedy Dark Ages, would expect.

Grant has invented a special alien language for the series. And just as 'smegging' from Red Dwarf became a catch phrase, so might words like 'spoot' and 'manakanama' be absorbed into the comedy lexicon.

The series stars Jack Docherty, of Absolutely fame, and The Fast Show's Mark Williams, both of whom have also appeared on Red Dwarf.

And in the new show,

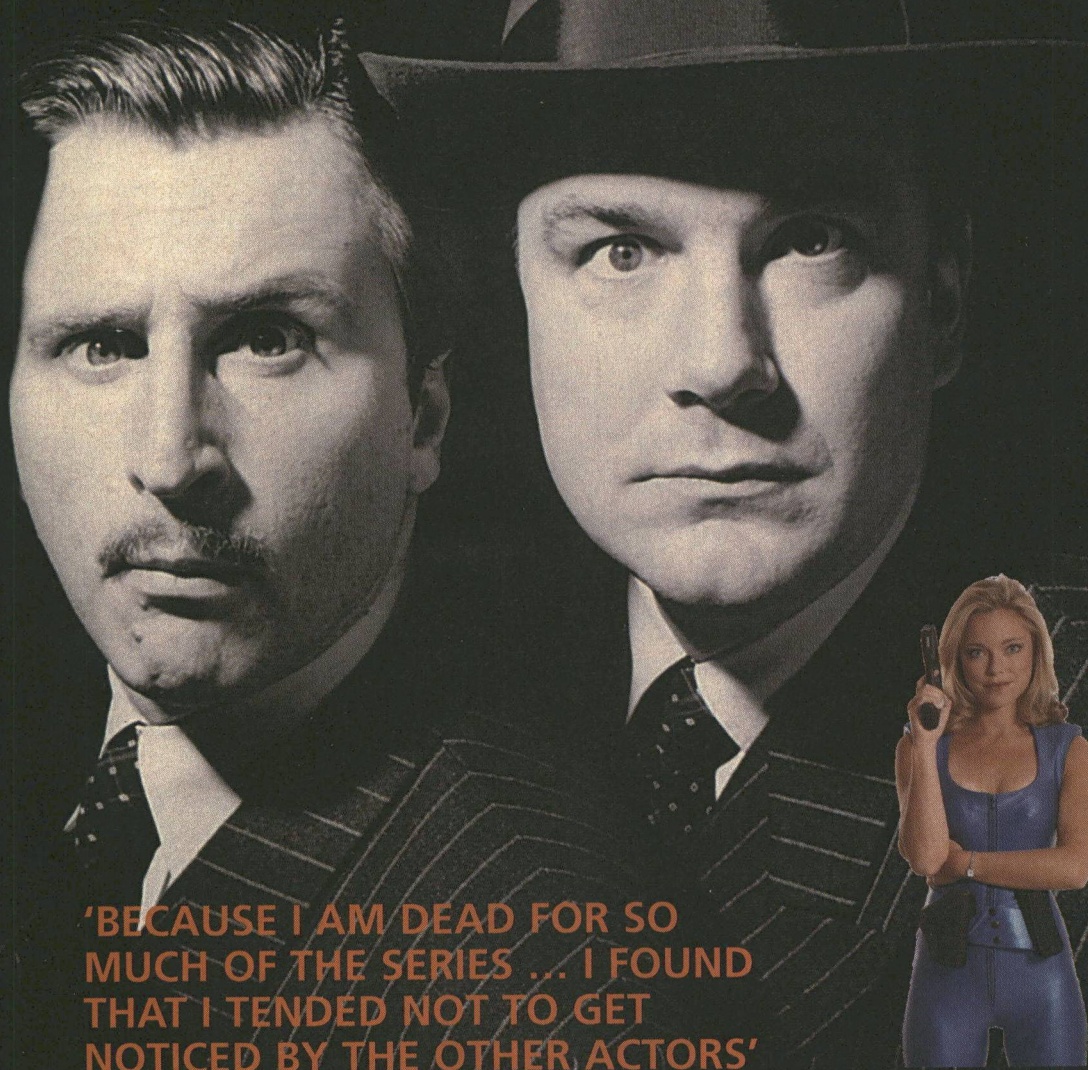

Williams reckons he has at last found a use for his knowledge of Anglo-Saxon, which he studied at Oxford University.

'It really helped me with Rob's alien language,' he says. 'In fact making this show is definitely the greatest use I have ever got out of my Anglo-Saxon. I don't speak [it] very much – I don't think anybody does any more – but it seemed to fit in very nicely.'

Williams and Docherty play Flynn and Niven, two alien 'cadets' from another planet, who have been sent on a fact-finding mission to Earth. The newcomers hope to go about their business unnoticed, but there is a flaw in their cunning plan. All their information on Earthlings derives from very old movies and magazines – hence their Forties-style clothes and mannerisms.

The dated duo emerge from a UFO accompanied by their Supervisor (played by comedian Milton Jones), who is promptly decapitated by a passing car.

But although that looks like being the end of The Supervisor, it's not the end of his head, which takes on a life of its own.

Says Jones: 'I suppose in some ways it was quite cathartic to see your own severed head. You think: "That's how I'll look when I'm dead."

'Because I am dead for so much of the series, it was very strange. I found that I tended not to get noticed by the other actors. We would finish filming a sequence, and the actors would get up and leave, and I would just be left – ignored, almost. Also, trying to shove food in my mouth was quite tricky, especially as my head sat in a plant pot and I was up to my neck in earth.'

Indeed, it quickly becomes apparent that these smartly dressed invaders are not all that they seem. A clue is that Rob Grant studied the work of Cleve Backer – who discovered plant communication in the 1960s – in order to create his alien language. But viewers must wait until the end of the second episode before they can see Flynn and Niven as they really are.

Other new wave comedians such as Morwenna Banks, Mike Hayley, Meera Syal (see pages 2-3) and Paul Darrow have cameo roles in the series, which was shot entirely on location at the eerie Ministry of Defence research facility, DERA (Defence Evaluation Research Agency) in Chertsey, Surrey. The base for the MoD's non-nuclear research programme, it's a location almost as weird as the show itself.

'It was spooky,' says Williams. 'A bit like what you hear about places like Belsen. There was no bird song, no dawn chorus.'

'DERA was used as a testing ground for tanks after World War I, all very top secret stuff then. And it has all these wonderfully big, wide roads, which was one of the main reasons why we filmed there. It suited our purposes brilliantly.'

'But filming was hard work. We spent day after day working for 12 hours in wool suits and trilbys under hot lights. It was difficult stuff to learn, too. The language was tricky – even with my Anglo-Saxon advantage.'

His on-screen partner, Jack Docherty, best known for his long-running TV chat show on Channel 5, also found some handy pointers for his role as an alien having problems mastering such human rituals as eating, sleeping and walking, from an unlikely source.

'In order to learn to walk like an alien, I simply observed my 18-month-old son taking his first steps,' he explains.

With a wealth of television and film credits between them, both men have appreciated the quality of Grant's writing. 'You know you are going to get something different,' says Williams, who has a supporting role in this month's Oscar-winning movie premiere Shakespeare in Love (see pages 18-19). 'And The Strangers is definitely that!'

SHAKESPEARE IN LOVE
FROM WEDNESDAY 9TH

Shakespeare in Love combines sweet romance and joyful comedy to hugely entertaining effect, so it comes as something of a shock to learn how much ill-feeling the historical hit inspired on its tortuous journey to the big screen.

The story of William Shakespeare (played by Joseph Fiennes) having his writer's block cleared by a secret love affair with Viola De Lesseps (Gwyneth Paltrow) went on to scoop seven Oscars. But there was a high price to pay for such success.

When the movie was first set to be made in 1992, the line-up was very different. Julia Roberts had agreed to play the female lead and Edward Zwick (Courage Under Fire, The Siege) was to direct. But with sets already being built at Pinewood Studios, Roberts suddenly pulled out of the project.

The problem? Daniel Day-Lewis, her first choice to play Shakespeare, had rejected the role. She was offered Joseph's big brother, Ralph Fiennes, but decided against him. She met Colin Firth. And turned him down. Sharpe star Sean Bean was another contender, and Paul (Withnail and I) McGann was also considered after being given a screen test.

It was a kick in the codpiece for everyone concerned, and the sets were dismantled amid considerable bitterness.

Even two years after the event Edward Zwick admitted, 'I still bear the wounds in my heart.'

John Madden, who was eventually chosen to direct, tactfully observed: 'Time has moved on and I did not concern myself with the abandoned movie, although I did keep on finding that bits of the set still existed. This could not have been easy for Ed Zwick, because he was so passionate about the film.'

Madden was also perplexed as to why the film had not been made, with or without Roberts, after reading the polished script by Tom Stoppard, based on an original idea by writer-producer Marc Norman. 'By the time I had finished page one, I knew that I would never be offered another one as good in my lifetime,' he says. 'What it meant to me was that I would be able to get every actor I wanted, just by showing them the script. Even the tiniest role has an interesting journey and everyone has something to say.'

The film is set in London in 1593 against the historically authentic background of rivalry between theatre owners Philip Henslowe (Geoffrey Rush), who managed the Rose Theatre for a group of actors called the Admiral's Men, and Richard Burbage (Martin Clunes), who owned the Curtain Theatre and was the star player of the Chamberlain's Men.

Will Shakespeare (Fiennes) is introduced as a rising young writer who is under pressure to satisfy the demand for new plays. But while working on a comedy, Romeo and Ethel, The Pirate's Daughter, he suffers from writer's block. He falls in love with one of his fans, Viola De Lesseps (the Oscar-winning Paltrow), who, like all women of the day, was not allowed to act on stage.

So driven is she by Shakespeare's works that she disguises herself as a young man, Thomas Kent, to win a role in

Plays and players:

Romeo, which is being written and rehearsed simultaneously. The film suggests that the duplicity, with Shakespeare confessing to 'Kent' his love for high-bred Viola, was the basis for his later comedy Twelfth Night.

But as he writes more of Romeo, with words suddenly released like a torrent since falling in love with Viola, he begins to shape it as a tragedy. It mirrors their own star-crossed relationship: Shakespeare has a wife and children back at home in Stratford-upon-Avon and Viola has been betrothed by her father, Sir Robert (Nicholas Le Prevost), to the insufferable Lord Wessex (Colin Firth).

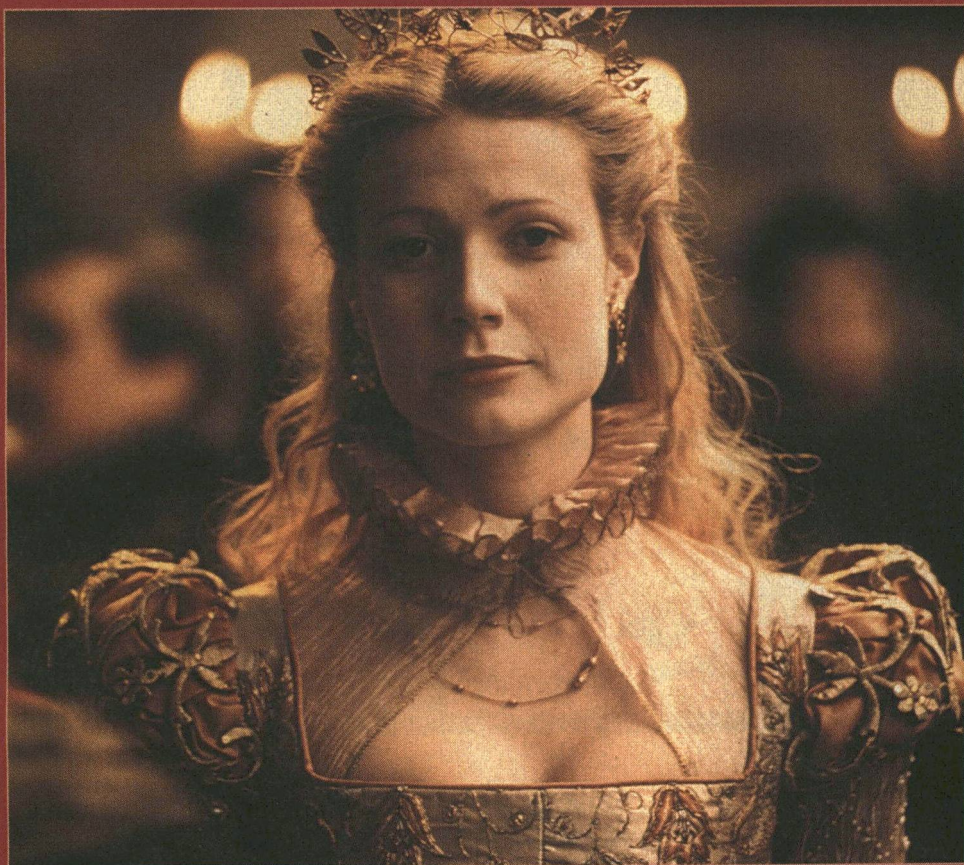

The script swings effortlessly back and forth between authenticity and pure invention, between comedy and tragedy. At its heart is the supposition that Shakespeare was a highly talented but flawed man who wanted to make a decent living from his work. Fiennes says: 'Shakespeare is difficult to pin down. I just had to think, "He is a guy called Will, looking to make a packet, get his name in lights, pay the rent and look after his family."

'He was around my age [29] when he wrote Romeo and Juliet, so I had a feeling for his emotions at the time.'

Fiennes, who believes the Bard was a dark and troubled romantic, continues: 'There is absolutely no evidence to point towards an affair with a woman already betrothed, but I have a feeling that it's as close to the truth as we will get.'

Australian actor Geoffrey Rush, meanwhile, appropriately plays his role of theatre owner Philip Henslowe like an Elizabethan Arthur Daley. Rush, who won an Oscar for his performance in Shine, says: 'The script had "Eat me" on the front page. Once I started doing research on the real Henslowe, whose diaries are available to be read by the public in Dulwich College, I realised that this part was written so well, because he was a bit of a shark. He wanted commercial crap to fill his theatre, not art.'

Dame Judi Dench – who deservedly won a Best Supporting Actress Oscar for her role as Queen Elizabeth – was given the replica of the Rose Theatre, which was built to the exact proportions. She is currently paying for it to be stored, so it can be used as a working theatre on a site to be negotiated at a later date.

'This is what Shakespeare in Love has done to us all,' she says. 'My husband [actor Michael Williams] says, "You are absolutely mad." But the script was so magnificent and the film such a pleasure to make, that we were all carried along with the sheer energy.'

In an ironic twist, Colin Firth was chosen as Gwyneth Paltrow's prospective husband long after being rejected by Roberts. He recalls: 'I originally met Julia Roberts with a view to playing Shakespeare. I am not bitter about being turned down for the part, but a lot of people lost work as a result of her pulling out.'

But what of Julia Roberts? Was parting with the film such sweet sorrow? She hid her disappointment at missing out on an Oscar to tell me, 'The original script was different, I think ours was even better.' But Tom Stoppard maintains it was virtually the same.

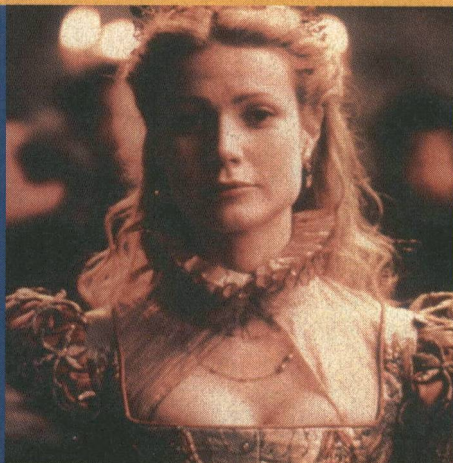

The debate, it seems, still rages on, but one thing is clear: despite the acrimony that surrounds its troubled production history, Shakespeare in Love remains one of the finest films to be made on these shores in years, and, thanks to the richness of its detail, one that rewards endless viewings.

A pet project of actor-writer-director Warren Beatty, this scathing political comedy tells of a disillusioned senator (Beatty) who finally feels free to tell the truth, regardless of how controversial it may be, after he has put out a contract on his own life. Sky 18 (L,S,M) Text

Kurt so good: set on a bleak planet used as a giant rubbish dump, director Paul Anderson's visually inventive sci-fi adventure Soldier sees Kurt Russell battle a band of genetically programmed superwarriors

SOLDIER may have gone down in history as the most expensive Hollywood movie ever to go direct to video in this country, but, in a climate where Universal Soldier 2 and The Avengers get a theatrical release, that shouldn't really put you off. It was directed by Briton Paul Anderson, and like his earlier American movies, Mortal Kombat and Event Horizon, it comes from that strange stratum of film-making where a picture can cost $60m and still look sort of tacky. It also has an action-heavy script that could just as easily have been done on the cheap as one of those explosions-and-robots quickies the Sci-Fi channel buys by the bucketload.

However, for a second-rank product it has a lot going for it. When a Hollywood screenwriter refers to giving a script a 'haircut', he or she is alluding to the common practice of taking a story from one genre and doing it again disguised as something different – sometimes in the hope that audiences won't notice but often just to have fun with the original and see how it works transposed elsewhere. The classic Red River is a Western haircut of Mutiny on the Bounty, while the less-than-classic Pamela Anderson

KIM NEWMAN ON ...
SOLDIER

The Kurt Russell adventure Soldier holds the dubious distinction of being the most expensive straight-to-video movie. But, as far as sci-fi action hokum goes, it has much to recommend it vehicle Barb Wire was a haircut of Casablanca, and we're currently in the midst of a run of teen movie haircuts of any classic literary classic that's available. Soldier, written by David Webb Peoples (whose two most famous credits are Blade Runner and Clint Eastwood's Oscar-laden Unforgiven), is a science fiction haircut of the Western Shane, with the lone gunman who helps out an isolated group of farmers against repressive cattlemen turned into a lone supersoldier who helps out an isolated planet of settlers against repressive militarist thugs.

Todd (a beefed-up Kurt Russell) is the product of futuristic combat training: babies are recruited from the incubator and raised only to be soldiers (out-of-breath kids who lag behind on a cross-country run are summarily executed) and enter a training program that emphasises killing the enemy, even if innocents are murdered in the process. After years of service, including some of the battles mentioned in Blade Runner (the Tanhauser Gate), these soldiers are supplanted by a new breed, genetically programmed from before birth, and Todd is bested in a test combat by his super-enhanced replacement, Caine (Jason Scott Lee). Todd, supposedly dead, is dumped on an inhospitable planet used as a rubbish dump and falls in with a small, peaceful community of shipwreck survivors who have been lost there. Like the character Shane, he has a complex relationship with a family, proving an example and an intimidation to a sheltered child, but this more action-oriented script solves the problem of Todd's attraction to a married woman (Connie Nielson) by having her husband (Sean Pertwee) killed before things can get complicated.

To test the mettle of the new soldiers, weaselly officer Jason Isaacs and old-style officer Gary Busey turn them loose on the garbage planet, with orders to treat anyone they come across as hostiles. Sadly, this is when the film's ambitions recede and it turns from an indictment of the Full Metal Jacket mentality that can create a human killing machine into a Rambo-style action picture, as Todd demonstrates his experience is superior to Caine's genes by single-handedly killing off 20 of the supersoldiers before facing Caine in the climactic fight. Though Russell is impressive with very few lines, conveying much through his refusal to speak, the emotional side tends to get slushy, especially in his Terminator 2-like relationship with a silent, angelic child. The effects are pretty much from stock – people running away from curtains of fire, Aliens-style space tanks trundling across the planet – but the production design creates an interesting junk world, with homes made of broken aircraft fuselages and pathways marked by broken parking meters.

Cable is great for catching up with movies you missed at the cinema; this time, it gives you the opportunity to catch something you were never given a chance to see.

JENNY ECLAIR

What was your first romantic encounter at the cinema?
 I remember going to see Dr Zhivago with a boy called Bill. I came back with one of those snog rashes. Of course, I hadn't seen any of it because you can't snog in glasses. I just remember seeing some white stuff, which I presume was snow. What is your favourite film?
Carrie, because I totally approve of telekinesis and teenage girls. I think most of them are probably capable of it if they learned to concentrate a bit more. Who is your favourite actor?
 I have a sneaking regard for Tim Roth because he's a Camberwell boy done good and I think we all have to stick together. What is your favourite comedy?
 I managed to watch ten minutes of Notting Hill, but I didn't laugh. I love the old-fashioned comedies, like the one with Marilyn Monroe where they all dressed up: Some Like It Hot.

MY MOST MEMORABLE MATCH

The heat was on for Sky Sports' American football commentator Nick Halling when London Monarchs played Birmingham Fire in the World League 1992 season. By Ross Biddiscombe

Although last year's win by Denver over Atlanta was my first Super Bowl and also my biggest game as a commentator for Sky Sports, I still remember this World League occasion back in 1992. 'I had been covering the sport both on TV and in print for several years when I was asked to do the commentary of London v the Fire for the now-defunct cable channel

Screensport, the first British voice ever to do this on any television broadcast. I was still a TV rookie and obviously nervous. However, my producer was a total contrast. 'The late Ted Nathanson was an American TV director of every major sporting event from the Olympics to Super Bowl and back. During this, my first game, he taught me my most important lesson.

'The first rule of any sporting commentary is to watch the screen rather than the game. I broke this rule and Ted started to remind me, talking all the more loudly from his studio into my earpiece, until finally letting rip with an unholy bellow and a few well-chosen swear words. His voice still rings in my ears when my eyes wander from the monitor.'

The French connection

Words: Nick Callow

A LOT has changed since Arsenal won the First Division title at Anfield in 1989 with their last-minute win over Liverpool. Just over a decade on and now they play in the Premier League, both clubs have French managers and a host of foreign playing stars, but they still share the same aim, to challenge for the championship, and that is what they will be doing again at Highbury this month. Arsenal manager Arsène Wenger (pictured) and his Liverpool counterpart, Gérard Houllier, are old friends with similar approaches to the game. Wenger has been the more successful to date, but he believes Houllier's side are catching up fast. And he speaks from knowledge, not out of friendship. 'I fully expect Liverpool to be challenging at the top at the end of the season,' Wenger said. 'People questioned some of their signings at the start of the season, but they were known to me, and now we can all see that Gérard has some very talented and ambitious players.' Lee Dixon - who played at Anfield in 1989 and will be at the heart of Arsenal's defence again for this match - said: 'Liverpool are coming back now and have a good record at Highbury so we know this will be an important game to win if we are going to challenge for the title again.'

Power Rangers

Words: Marc Isaacs

DUTCH midfielder Giovanni van Bronckhorst (pictured) believes Rangers will be stronger than ever as they enter a key month in the defence of their title. Rangers have three crucial away matches and Van Bronckhorst says that the Scottish winter break will help them ahead of their rivals. The Dutch international feared Rangers were in danger of burning out, having played over 30 games in European and domestic competitions before the New Year. Dundee United, Hibernian and Dundee will aim to show that they can all match the title favourites on home territory, but Van Bronckhorst said: 'After a month's lay-off, I think we will become a very powerful team again. 'Before the break we had played 17 league games and lost only once. That says it all about how much this club wants to win the title again. 'We know, like last year, this will be another crucial time of the season for us.'

Why the Worthington's worth it

Words: Gerry Cox

THE WORTHINGTON Cup may not be taken seriously by a handful of the Premier League's top clubs, but do not think the rest treat it so lightly. The League Cup, as it was originally called, has always played second fiddle to the FA Cup in terms of importance and prestige, which is why teams such as Arsenal, Chelsea and Manchester United have chosen to field weakened sides in the competition recently. But for the other 89 professional clubs, it still represents the chance of a Wembley cup final, some silverware in the trophy cabinet and a place in the Uefa Cup. Just ask Tottenham, whose wilderness years without a trophy were ended when they beat Leicester City to lift the Worthington Cup last March. They have now won the League Cup three times, and last season's victory was perhaps the most significant because it ended eight barren years and got the club back into European competition, something their fans used to expect every season. Ian Walker, Tottenham's goalkeeper,

Like Tottenham Hotspur last season, the winners of this month's Worthington Cup final at Wembley can look forward to a place in the Uefa Cup knows more than most what it meant to the club and supporters. Having been substitute goalkeeper when they last won the FA Cup in 1991, Walker was delighted to finally play in a Wembley cup final. 'It was the highlight of my Spurs career, just to walk out at Wembley for a cup final, and then to actually win it was brilliant. 'Our win over Leicester was not the greatest game, but it is the winning that counts once you get that far. It meant so much to the club, the players and the fans because we had been too long without winning anything. And the best thing was that it got us back into Europe. That is a real bonus for the winners of this competition. The FA Cup is still the biggest cup competition, but as long as there is still European qualification at the end of it, this cup will be worthwhile.' Tottenham were knocked out this season by Fulham before Christmas, and it could well be another First Division side lifting the trophy this season. 'It would be fantastic for any side to qualify for Europe from the First Division,' added Walker. 'It just goes to show that the magic of the competition is still there.'

Dallaglio rises to the challenge

As the Six Nations Championship kicks off this month, Hank Egberink tackles England star player Lawrence Dallaglio on his team's chances of success

ENGLAND'S first two games of the inaugural Six Nations Championship are against Ireland at Twickenham and followed by the French at Stade de France. Ireland had great hopes for the 1999 Five Nations. They were unlucky to lose their first game of the campaign against the French at Lansdowne Road 9-10, but beating the Welsh away at Wembley proved a false dawn as they then lost to both England and the Scots. The World Cup proved another disappointment as they succumbed to underdogs Argentina at the play-off stage. Former England captain Lawrence Dallaglio believes Ireland will be keen to make amends for the World Cup. 'Ireland have a point to prove and Warren Gatland's side will be tough to beat. Ireland will come to Twickenham intent on victory, but we need to get off to a good start so it will be competitive,' he said. France should be favourites for the Six Nations title, after so impressively reaching the Rugby World Cup final. But that tournament deflected attention from what had been a calamitous year, beginning with the wooden spoon in the Five Nations. In the summer, a shock loss to Tonga was followed by a 54-7 mauling by the All Blacks, and they were still in disarray on the eve of the World Cup when Wales beat them in Cardiff. Dallaglio believes the French and English are evenly matched. He said: 'They should be marginal favourites, as Stade de France has not been a happy hunting ground for us. We lost there in 1998

High and mighty: Action from last year's Rugby World Cup where Lawrence Dallaglio was an inspiration for England and again to the Springboks in the World Cup - it will be a very hostile environment. 'Olivier Magne and Franck Tournaire are both dangerous up front, while any number of their backs are capable of turning a game,' he added. 'They are hard to defend or counter against, especially if we catch them on a good day. We have got to keep on top of them and not allow them the time and space to play their natural game.' England lost only four internationals last year, with three coming against the southern hemisphere giants. The fourth was against Wales in their final, decisive Five Nations match. England must feel they handed the title to Scotland and will be determined to redress the balance this time around with an emphatic showing.

Holy Chow

East meets West with explosively entertaining results in Replacement Killers, Hong Kong action icon Chow Yun-Fat's dynamic Hollywood debut. Chow, who earned cult status with his performances in a quintet of cartridge concertos for director John Woo, including the classics The Killer and Hard-Boiled, exudes a brooding intensity in his first English-language role as hunted hitman John Lee. Mira Sorvino (above with Chow) makes a spunky heroine, acquitting herself well in the physically demanding role of an ace passport forger who finds herself dodging bullets with Lee. The film's baroque visual stylings impress as much as the pyrotechnics.

	LIVE PREMIER SNOOKER LEAGUE by Ross Biddiscombe SKY SPORTS 3 8.00PM, SKY SPORTS 1 12.15AM				PLAYBOY TV/ ADULT CHANNEL ADD-ON CHANNEL
	This is one of oldest televised snooker tournaments there is and, even after 14 years, it still attracts the best players. John Higgins (pictured) is the reigning champion after beating the self-styled people's champion Jimmy White in the final. But the final is weeks away because this is still the best-of-eight-game league format. Perhaps the man to watch, apart from regular heroes like Stephen Hendry and Ronnie O'Sullivan is Marco Fu from Hong Kong who is about to set the sport on fire. 				TELEVISION X ADD-ON CHANNEL

LIVE FORD SCOTTISH FOOTBALL: DUNDEE UNITED V RANGERS SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

Tannadice Park is buzzing again and Paul Sturrock is the man at the centre of the action. As this former Dundee United player makes his managerial mark, this east coast club is the only one chasing the two Glaswegian powerhouses in the Scottish Premier League. So tonight's visit by Rangers (pictured) is another test for the Tangerines, especially since their hero striker Billy Dodds disappeared on the transfer market to the Gers back in December.

LIVE EURO TOUR GOLF: GREG NORMAN HOLDEN INTERNATIONAL SKY SPORTS 1 6.00AM, 3.00AM

The PGA European Tour finds comfort in the warm climate of Sydney, for the Greg Norman Holden International at the Lakes Golf Course which is noted for its multitude of water hazards and stubborn rough. Although Mr Norman himself missed the cut on day two last year, there was still plenty of excitement as two Kiwis - Michaels Long (pictured) and Campbell - fought with Germany's Bernhard Langer for the title. Long won in the end after Langer triple-bogeyed the last.

Dead strange

Director Jim Jarmusch's existential grunge Western Dead Man rates as one of the most eccentric forays into the genre. Accompanied by an abrasive fuzz guitar score by Neil Young, this haunting outdoors adventure follows fatally wounded accidental outlaw William Blake (Johnny Depp, above) on his hallucinatory odyssey across a bleak landscape to his death. Escorting him on his journey is an educated American-Indian called Nobody, who mistakes Blake for the ghost of the English poet and painter of the same name, while cannibalistic hired killer Lance Henriksen murders his own accomplices to better follow Blake's trail. Dead Man is an acquired taste, but those who cannot adapt to its dreamlike pacing may still find themselves struggling to forget such scenes as Depp's poignant, poetic voyage in his funeral canoe. FilmFour Saturday 5th 11.45pm

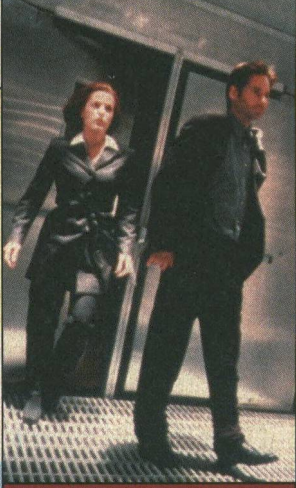

The lizard king

The world's largest lizard prowls across National Geographic Channel this week in Komodo Dragon, a documentary devoted to the predatory carnivore. Discovered early in the 1900s, the 'land crocodile', as the creature was first described, can grow up to three metres in length. National Geographic Channel Saturday 5th 8.00pm

Sixth sense

Ireland travel to Twickenham this weekend for their difficult opening fixture of rugby union's inaugural Six Nations Championship. In the teams' Five Nations clash in Dublin last season, the kicking of fly-half Jonny Wilkinson (pictured) helped seal a 27-15 victory for England. Sky Sports 2 Saturday 5th 1.30pm - LIVE

 Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries

21 March-20 April ★★
 SELF-SACRIFICE may not be your style, but it could help salvage a relationship. Be prepared to forego your own needs for those of your loved ones, and try to keep your mouth in check around more sensitive family members.

Libra

24 September-23 October ★★
 THE need to outsmart others may backfire, so put relationships on an equal footing as soon as possible. Yours is usually a peace-loving sign, but the aggressive planet Mars brings out your competitive spirit this month.

Taurus

21 April-21 May ★★★
 BENEVOLENT Jupiter makes its foray into your sign this month, turning your luck around and giving romance a kick-start. Taureans who have been finding it tough for months will feel the pressures gradually begin to ease.

Scorpio

24 October-22 November ★★
 WAVES of nostalgia may wash over you, prompting a sojourn to the past. And while this might be as harmless as browsing through old photograph albums, it could also be as dangerous as trying to rekindle a long-lost romantic relationship.

Gemini

22 May-21 June ★★
 HASTEN arrangements and schedule discussions for the first half of the month. Your ruler Mercury goes out of phase from the third week and there could be all kinds of complications and difficult people to deal with after that.

Sagittarius

23 November-22 December ★★
 JAUNTY and jovial Jupiter may have put zip back into your love life, but it's also given you false bravado. Once it changes positions mid-month, there could be a personal price to pay for your recent reckless behaviour.

Cancer

22 June-23 July ★
 YOU may feel passionate about a particular issue, but should avoid preaching to everyone about it. Even friends and family who are usually loving and long-suffering are likely to tire of your fervour and run for cover.

Capricorn

23 December-20 January ★★
 MARS breathes new life into your relationships, while Venus hurls charming people into your orbit. In the weeks ahead you'll create a myriad of memories and overcome obstacles that until recently seemed almost insurmountable.

Leo

24 July-23 August ★★
 BY month end you may feel far removed from where you are now. Instead of lamenting a loss, you'll be celebrating a homecoming or enjoying a more lavish lifestyle. People you meet now are meant to be part of life's journey.

Aquarius

21 January-19 February ★★
 SUN in your sign encourages you to circulate more and flaunt previously hidden talents. During this magnificent month, people will be captivated by your charm and in awe of your achievements. Accept the accolades graciously.

Virgo

24 August-23 September ★★
 YOU may be wounded by a thoughtless remark, but fortunately you will recover quickly. The tough planet Saturn has helped you develop a thicker skin lately and its lingering effect now helps to protect your tender heart from pain.

Pisces

20 February-20 March ★★
 THERE'S no point burying your head in the sand while Mars remains in your sign. For the first half of February this candid planet urges you come clean with loved ones and demand honesty in return. After that you can gloss over problems more easily.

	LIVE INTERNATIONAL CRICKET: ZIMBABWE V ENGLAND SKY SPORTS 2 12NOON, 4.30PM, SKY SPORTS 3 7.00PM It's the final group match in the triangular series contested between the hosts South Africa, Zimbabwe (whose Neil Johnson is pictured, left) and England from Centurion Park. Today the two visiting teams play at one of the country's prettiest grounds with a place in the final for the winners. England came in for some fierce criticism after their Test series defeat against the Proteas last month, so this tournament offers the chance for the captain Nasser Hussain (pictured, right) and his team to improve their standing. Pokémon

for battle:
Misty, Ash, Brock
and Ash's special
Pokémon, Pikachu

Pocket monsters, FOREST ADVENTURES

and master trainers – the vast world of Pokémon is the latest craze to grip the UK, with the first movie out later this year. What's it all about? Follow our guide and you may find yourself as addicted as the rest of us ...

Pokémon, the TV series, originates from a Nintendo Game Boy game, produced in Japan in 1996.

Pokémon is the name given to an assortment of more than 150 'Pocket Monsters', some rarer than others.

Each type of Pokémon has special powers, depending on which type it is and which element it belongs to. For instance, Pikachu is a mouse type and hails from the electric element.

The task of a trainer is to capture Pokémon and train them to do battle with other Pokémon. To be successful, trainers have to nurture and teach their Pokémon well.

Ultimately every trainer's ambition is to be given the title of Master Trainer and be the world's greatest Pokémon master.

Ten-year-old Ash Ketchum was introduced to the world of Pokémon by Pokémon genius Professor Oak. Ash's prized Pokémon is Pikachu.

Ash is the hero and is determined to be the best Pokémon trainer ever. He is accompanied by friends Brock and Misty, both Pokémon gym leaders, who specialise in rock and water-type Pokémon respectively.

Gary is the grandson of Professor Oak and is Ash's regular opponent in Pokémon battles. To be the best, Ash has to defeat Gary in a final battle.

Team Rocket are fronted by James and Jesse. Helped by Meowth, their mischievous Pokémon, they are set on controlling all Pokémon and stopping Ash from succeeding in his quest.

- Did you know?
- The sixth most-searched-for word on the Internet is Pokémon!
 - To collect all the Pokémon on the Nintendo game, players must connect with other Game Boys to trade monsters. Interaction is definitely the name of the game!
 - When the first ship-load of Pokémon game cartridges arrived at Hamley's toy store in London, they sold out within a day.
 - Pokémon: The First Movie took more than $30m in its first weekend of release in the US. It's due to hit UK screens later this year

Week 3

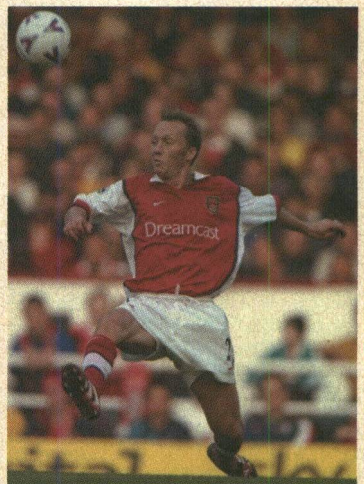

Saturday 12th February-Friday 18th February

Outer space driller thriller

A gigantic asteroid is hurtling towards Earth in the race-against-time sci-fi epic Armageddon. Enter ace driller Bruce Willis and his team of affable misfits, who are recruited by NASA to journey into space and plant a nuclear bomb deep within the rock. While this designer disaster movie from Michael (The Rock) Bay has a tendency to take itself too seriously, it still scores as a superior and hugely enjoyable slice of escapist fare thanks to its thrilling sense of adventure and awe-inspiring special effects.

Sky Premier Saturday 12th 8.00pm

Gunning for the league title

This Sunday Liverpool descend on Highbury to battle it out with Arsenal (whose Lee Dixon is pictured) in a fixture of pure Premier League pedigree. Some passionate play is assured as both teams are equally determined to take the league title from holders Manchester United.

Mark Williams and Jack Docherty (left) star as alien 'cadets' clad in Forties clothes who are struggling to get to grips with the human rituals of eating, walking and sleeping. Milton Jones plays their unfortunate supervisor, who literally loses his head.

	 It's still early in the season for the ladies' golf tour of America, but it's not too early to rack up a win. That means all the top players will be in California for the Los Angeles Women's Championship. The stunning Wood Ranch Golf Club in Simi Valley plays host to an event worth $750,000 and the top tips for most of that money will be the likes of South Korean Se Ri Pak (pictured, left) and local hope Juli Inkster (pictured, right). It'll be an exciting first day at the Riviera Country Club in Pacific Palisades, California, with the world's best like Tiger Woods (pictured, right) and David Duval in the line-up, but a confident Els will be hard to beat. 				10.00 Freeview 10.05 Rendezvous 11.40 Adult Stars Close-Up 12midnight Freeview 12.10am Frisky Hot Frauleins 12.35 No Man's Land 1.55 Lesbian Fantasies 2.15 Lesbian Lust 2.35 Private Model 3.30-4.00am LA Swimstyles – See Me

Chocolate Brownies with Sally Meen

Delicious, easy to prepare and perfect for Valentine's Day, these delectable chocolate brownies are perfect to make as a gift for someone special. And even the boys can make these!

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 20-25 minutes
Makes: 16 brownies

Ingredients

140g (5oz) unsifted flour
90g (3oz) cocoa flour
1/2 tsp baking powder
1/2 tsp salt
225g (8oz) unsalted butter
225g (8oz) granulated sugar
1 1/2 tps vanilla extract
4 large eggs
225g (8oz) walnuts
140g (5oz) white chocolate chunks
140g (5oz) milk chocolate chunks

Method

1. Pre-heat the oven to 180 degrees C/350 degrees F/Gas Mark 4.
2. Line a nine-inch (23cm) square cake tin with foil (shiny side down). Butter the foil well.
3. Sift together the flour, baking powder, cocoa flour and salt, then set aside.
4. Melt the butter in a large heavy-based saucepan over a moderate heat. Remove from the heat and stir in the sugar, vanilla extract and the eggs – one at a time.
5. Stir in the sifted dry ingredients, the

- walnuts and then the milk chocolate and white chocolate chunks.
6. Spread smoothly into the prepared tin and bake for 20-25 minutes. Insert a skewer into the middle and, if it comes out almost clean, it's cooked.
 7. Cool the tin for about 15 minutes, then turn it onto a cooking rack. Remove from the tin and peel off the foil lining.
 8. Let the brownies rest until cool and cut into 16 squares.

You can watch Sally Meen on Chocolate Covered – Valentine's Special, CFN, Saturday 12th 11.00am. Repeated Monday 14th 4.00pm and Wednesday 16th 12.30pm

Puds you like

There's more to the art of making puddings than meets the eye. Lotte Duncan (pictured) expertly proves this point in a new 13-part series, Simply Puddings (CFN, starts Wednesday 16th, 3.30pm), during which she dishes up more than 30 puds while explaining the history of some of England's most famous desserts. For instance, did you know that blanchmange was originally a dish of almond milk and minced chicken? Didn't think so!

Week 4

Saturday 19th February-Tuesday 29th February

It's a mad, mad, mad, mad world

In his Hollywood movies, Greek film-maker Costa-Gavras succeeds in making passionate political statements within the confines of mainstream drama. A case in point is his most recent offering, Mad City, in which the director couches some caustic comments on media manipulation in the terms of a suspenseful thriller. Sacked security guard John Travolta finds himself at the centre of a siege scenario, while Dustin Hoffman plays a scoop-hungry reporter who exploits the situation to his advantage. Sky Premier Tuesday 29th 10.00pm

Loving the aliens

3rd Rock from the Sun, which returns for its fifth season this week, has won a huge following and awards aplenty thanks to its brilliantly observant scripts and affable performances, including double Emmy award-winner John Lithgow (left) as alien leader Dick Solomon. The series opens with Vicki Dubcek (Jan Hooks) giving birth to the baby of Big Giant Head. Sky One from Tuesday 29th 8.00pm

Friendly fire

It's billed as a friendly, but there's unlikely to be much love lost between England and Argentina when they clash at Wembley this week. Attention will be focused on David Beckham (above, right) who saw red after kicking out at Diego Simeone in the last World Cup. England will be wary of the firepower of striker Gabriel Batistuta (above, left). Sky Sports 2 Wednesday 23rd 7.00pm – LIVE

SQUASH: TOURNAMENT OF CHAMPIONS – NEW YORK SKY SPORTS 2 4.00AM
The sport of squash needs some high-powered events and venues if it's to make an impression on modern-day spectators and this Tournament of Champions at New York's Grand Central Station fits the bill. Starring men like Canada's Jonathan Power (left in picture), many spectators will be interested in the event which features a rarely-used portable court and lots of top-class action. A prize purse of $60,000 should make this one of the most hard-fought tournaments of the year.

LIVE FORD INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL: ENGLAND V ARGENTINA SKY SPORTS 2 7.00PM

Now England have finally made the Euro 2000 finals, it's time to test themselves in decent friendlies and Argentina line up tonight with the second-round match at France 98 still fresh in everyone's mind. David Beckham's (pictured, left) sending off that night was crucial and he'll want to make amends, but Gabriel Batistuta (pictured, right), the Argentine striker, could be even more central to tonight's plot with his outstanding goal-scoring instincts. Whatever happens, there should be no penalty shoot-out.

Rare film of the late Kurt Cobain, as he talks music in 'Egos & Icons: Nirvana'. VH1 10.00pm

The 64-man knockout Andersen Consulting Matchplay Championship didn't set the world on fire in its inaugural year in 1999 when Jeff Maggert (pictured) won. The final that the organisers really wanted was more Tiger Woods v Colin Montgomerie and they'll no doubt want Sergio Garcia in there too this year at La Costa Resort and Spa in Carlsbad, California. However, matchplay can throw up plenty of surprises so don't put your money on Tiger for this one.					10.00pm Freeview 10.05 Rendezvous 11.15 Eden 12midnight Freeview 12.10am Frisky Hot Früheins 12.35 Farrah's All Girl Adventure 1.40 Lesbian Fantasies 2.00 Lesbian Lust 2.20 Doctor Sex 3.10 Raw Adventures 3.40-4.00am English Rose	12midnight The Ten Minute Preview 12.10am Eurochicks 12.25 Diggin' the Dirt 12.40 FILM: South by South East 1.00 Five Minute Freeview 1.05 FILM continues 1.55 Adult Feature 2.20 FILM: Club DV8 II 3.30-4.00am Paula King Famously championed by John Lennon, this 1971 oddity (the title translates as 'The Mole') from Chilean maverick Alejandro Jodorowsky is invigorating in its genre-defying audacity. It's an ultraviolent, hallucinogenic, pantomimic, political Zen Western. Sort of.

LIVE FOOTBALL LEAGUE: BIRMINGHAM CITY V IPSWICH TOWN SKY SPORTS 2 11.00AM

Birmingham City and Ipswich Town (whose Fabian Wilnis is pictured, right) were both knocked out of the Division One play-offs last season and both clubs are big enough and probably good enough to mix it in the Premier League. Trevor Francis's Birmingham side have suffered terrific amounts of injuries this season and he will need his former Premier League players like Graham Hyde (pictured, left) to pull the team together if they are to maintain their drive towards another play-off spot.

A west London derby that makes your mouth water. QPR (whose Ian Baraclough is pictured, left) play Fulham (whose Sean Davis is pictured, right) and, as Division One games go, this should be a cracker. Gerry Francis has turned Rangers around yet again on a shoestring and they are contending for the play-offs against all the odds. Fulham, meanwhile, have to justify Mohamed Al Fayed's big bucks and maintain their winning progress. Add local bragging rights and you have two very committed teams.

Our Lady of the Rosary

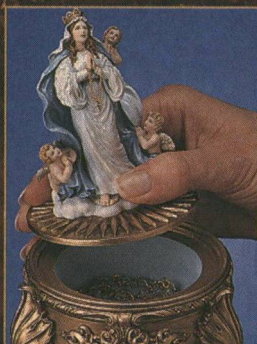

*Precious
Rosary Beads Included*

*A Collector's Edition sculpted rosary box
by acclaimed artist
Riccardo Bianchi.*

For centuries, the saying of the rosary has been cherished as the perfect devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Now famed artist Riccardo Bianchi creates a richly sculpted rosary box in tribute to the final mystery of the rosary, the crowning of the Blessed Virgin Mary in heaven.

The Holy Mother is radiant, her lovely face aglow with heavenly light as the angels flock around her. It is a work of power and reverence, sculpted in hand-painted Tesori porcelain, a blend of powdered porcelain and resins, and gleaming with golden colour. Inside the box is a set of sparkling, crystal-clear rosary beads, coated with 22 carat gold. Just £39.50, this hand-numbered Collector's Edition rosary box is available exclusively from Franklin Mint.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. If you wish to return any Franklin Mint purchase, you may do so within 30 days of your receipt of that purchase for replacement, credit or refund.

The gold-accented rosary beads store easily in the sculpted base.

Actual size of sculpture is 5 1/2" (13.9 cm) in height.
Rosary beads are 28" (72.1 cm) in length.

WE WANT WWF SMACKDOWN

DO SKY intend to buy WWF Smackdown as part of their wrestling line-up? The storylines from Raw Is War are always continued as part of Smackdown, which means viewers miss what is happening during the week. If Sky do intend buying it, will it be on late at night so all the fights will be shown in full without cutting to the crowd when someone gets hit?

D Moynes, e-mail

● Sky Sports released this statement: 'The WWF's new flagship show Smackdown joins Sky Sports' wrestling line-up from 8 January 2000. WWF Classics premieres on 10 January and will give fans the chance to relive classic bouts from the past. This will be followed during the week by Live Wire, Metal and Superstars with the Federation's premier flagship show Raw continuing on Friday nights.'

All the programmes will be shown in their late-night versions in evening slots on Sky Sports. Edited versions of Live Wire, Metal and Superstars will continue in their daytime slots on Sky Sports as well as Sky One, which will also screen the edited version of Smackdown. Also, we are working towards a long-term agreement with the WWF, which will continue with the above shows, include the majority of live special events, and will offer viewers an extra 146 hours of original programming each year.'

THE GAME'S UP

I AM absolutely delighted! The powers concerned at Challenge TV have, in their wisdom, taken off the intolerable The Games Room. This is the best Millennium present for me! I've always disliked this show's childish questions, puerile games and the patronizing attitude of the presenters to the viewers.

Into Top Gear with Vicki

The only exception was Kevin Duala. Thank you, Challenge, for your programmes. It is great to see some of the old shows again. But, please, don't revive The Games Room!

Eileen Howlett

DON'T PLAY IT AGAIN, TNT!

IT IS beyond my comprehension how TNT can get away with showing the same films over and over again. No doubt it is financially advantageous for them to do so, but does it not matter that viewers like me are becoming bored to death with their programming? Someone should shoot The Dukes of Hazzard, wake up Freddy from his Nightmares and transport The Hitchhiker to the other side of the moon. I think you get my drift!

Sarah Lindsay, Poole

● TNT respond: 'We appreciate we cannot please everyone but since the relaunch of TNT on 15 October last year we haven't repeated a single movie or episode of our series. TNT, now a general entertainment channel, airs a wide variety of programming, ranging from WCW Wrestling and music concerts to movies and series, including most recently, John Grisham's The Client. The latest addition to our gallery of entertainment was the NBA in January.'

REVVING IT UP WITH VICKI

I AM really enjoying Top Gear GTI on UK Horizons. Vicki Butler-Henderson is the best presenter Top Gear has ever had, except, perhaps, Jeremy Clarkson, but now he's gone, need I say more? Vicki has the best presenting technique, with loads of charisma. She's an excellent driver, a racing one in fact, and with a perspective on the car that the enthusiast wants. We want to know how a car handles, how fast and chuckable it is, and see good action footage, which is what Vicki and Top Gear GTI deliver. Oh, and last but not least, she's gorgeous. If you're after fuel consumption or how many golf clubs you can get in the boot, go and read a consumer magazine. Please don't mess with Top Gear GTI, or Vicki – they're both fab.

John Jones, e-mail

● Congratulations, John, you've won our £50 prize!

A BRUCIE BONUS

WELL done to FilmFour for showing the full, uncut version of Bruce Lee's The Big Boss (2 December). It was a collector's dream as the video version on sale has all the best bits cut out. Come on, FilmFour, let's see some more Bruce Lee films (Enter the Dragon and Fist of Fury). I'll guarantee you a lot of viewers and a million happy fans. Thanks for showing The Big Boss as the director intended.

Jason Robertson
Staffordshire

● FilmFour inform us that Channel 4 and FilmFour have the rights to show Enter the Dragon and Fist of Fury. The latter was shown on Channel 4 at the end of last year. The likelihood is that these films will be shown, on Channel 4 or FilmFour, during 2000.

FOOTBALL MUNDANE

WHO decides which football matches are shown live on Sky Sports? Week in, week out we are treated to matches that people would not cross the road to watch. Surely it is common sense that the matches to be shown should be top of the table, relegation battles or intense local derbies. The match shown in the second round of the FA Cup between Lincoln and Luton (unbelievably featured again in the replay) was mind-boggling! Nobody was remotely bothered who won, and it wasn't even a Cup game with a good atmosphere. On the same night as this non-event of a match, former cup-winners and giants of the game Preston North End were taking on non-league Enfield (a side with a proud giant-killing record), away from home. Come on, Sky, show what the people would actually be interested in watching!

Tom Wiggins, Preston

● Sky Sports respond: 'We did consider the Preston tie – as you say, Tom, Preston have a great history and Enfield a reputation for cup upsets. The game was originally scheduled as an away match at St Albans and we visited the ground – with its famous pitchside trees – to see if it would be possible to televise the match. It was not possible to cover the tie properly there, so we turned our attention to the Luton vs Lincoln fixture. This proved to be an entertaining and popular match – with four goals – followed by a good replay.'

THANK YOU FOR THE MUSIC

THANK you to VH1 for a great day of ABBA music (20 December). I am a big fan of Agnetha, Benny, Björn and Frida. Does VH1 have any more plans for broadcasting ABBA music in the near future?

Jeff Silverwood
West Yorkshire

● VH1 inform us they are thrilled with the response to the ABBA Day and will endeavour to show more ABBA specials this spring.
